

Abstract

The invention relates to a method for producing a fertilising agent containing urea, by means of synthesis step, an evaporation process, and a granulation unit. According to said method, a self-regulating centrifugal pump is used to reduce the dwell time and to optimise the positioning of the components of the method for transporting the product flow of the evaporation process to the granulation unit.